

Kentuckiana Cleanfuel Adding Second Location

Kentuckiana Cleanfuel LLC is planning a second location in Louisville. KCF Station 2, a subsidiary of Kentuckiana Cleanfuel, plans to construct a new fueling station that will compress natural gas for use in vehicles. The station will consist of an on-site compressor to compress the gas to a higher, vehicle ready pressure. The gas then will be stored in a series of storage vessels until the fuel is needed.

I-75 Green Corridor Project

Since 2009, 30+ partners have been collaborating on the "longest biofuels corridor on the planet" by making all 1,786 miles of the U.S. interstate I-75 traversable using either of the biofuels E85 ethanol or B20 biodiesel. Through 2013, the project has added 28 E85 stations and 9 B20 stations in all 6 of the corridor states, and those stations have sold over 2.4 million gallons of biofuels! By the project's end, we expect to be offsetting nearly 1.5 million GGEs per year of petroleum. ## Senate Passes Farm Bill

After years of delays and contentious negotiations that threatened to derail the farm bill, Congress completed its work on a new five-year package Tuesday that now heads to the president. The Senate voted 68-32 on a $500 billion farm bill that will end direct payments to farmers, expand the popular crop insurance program and cut spending on food stamps for some poor Americans by 1%. The White House announced Tuesday afternoon that Obama is going to sign the farm bill on Friday during a visit to East Lansing, Mich.

UPS Plans for 900-Plus LNG Trucks

UPS plans to have deployed between 900 and 1,000 liquefied natural gas-fueled tractors at more than a dozen locations by August, with Jacksonville, CACH (the firm's Chicago Area Consolidated Hub) and Tennessee each getting more than 100, according to a company deployment plan. Texas will have 80 LNG trucks, mostly in Houston, by the end of this first quarter.
